

Arctic Orienteering Club
Annual Meeting Score-0
September 23, 2005
Russian Jack Springs Park
Meet Director: Dan Billman

Format: find as many controls as possible in 45 minutes. Controls had different points depending on distance and complexity. There were special "twists" similar to last year's Annual Meeting Score-0:

Between 20 and 30 minutes after the start, it was permitted to take down one control, for which the participant received an additional three times the control value, and after which the participant was not allowed to score any more points. The participant was to return to the start area (by any devious route) holding the control like a lantern for all to see. Anyone tagging the person received the points associated with that control. Bill Spencer was specifically instructed to "play fair" and not attempt to elude less fleet-footed participants.

After 30 minutes, people could take down two controls (with similar rules as for taking a single control). In addition, there was a special positive control whose point value was Ian Moore's total points minus 120. Finally, there were two other special neutralizing controls that would eliminate the special positive control value if Ian brought either of them back.

The meet director was pleased to learn that participants brought back ALL of the controls!
